Improve Usability of TUNE INDEX Utility Options

UNDER REVIEW

We make extensive use of the TUNE INDEX utility for orphan adoption but the RESEQUENCE and REBALANCE options are not practical to use against large indexes due to excessive run-times caused by high I/O.

Can something be done to the utility to improve the efficiency and reduce the amount of work required to process large index structures? Possible suggestions would be to defer orphan adoption until all SR8s are relocated to their target pages or allowing the utility to be interruptible and restartable which would allow the index to be processed in pieces based on available processing windows.

This is a resubmission of DAR 19400000-1: IMPROVE TUNE INDEX PERFORMANCE
